An Overview of Tortola

In 1775, the economy started to decline with the American Revolution. Though the Napoleonic Wars brought warships to Road Harbor, the decline accelerated because of a drought and a hurricane. With the freeing of the islands' 5,133 slaves in 1834, and a cholera epidemic in 1853, plantations were abandoned and the islands reverted to bush.

The island grew and established banks, schools and hospitals from 1871 to 1956, while the islands were part of the federation of the Leeward Islands. The British Virgin Islands became a separate colony in 1956, and in 1967, a new constitution gave the islands a ministerial system of government. They are now largely self-governing with offshore banking as the number one industry followed by tourism.

In addition to Tortola (10 square miles), there are more than 50 other islands, rocks and crags in the BVI chain. Most of the islands are fairly small and still uninhabited. The Virgin Gorda Highlights tour provides time to enjoy popular Baths National Park with its unusual rock formations. The Best of Tortola tour affords panoramic views of Peter Island, St. John and St. Thomas.

Road Town retains character with pastel colored buildings.
Residents like to boast that the tallest objects on any of the islands are coconut trees. Territorial law prohibits buildings more than two stories.

The BVI Tourist Board has three locations-at the pier, in the center of town, and at the Ferry Dock.

Tortola's population is about 16,000, and most live in Road Town. Main commerce is banking, insurance, tourism and some light industry. The airport is too small for large jets so the tourism tide is held back. British Virgin Islanders are friendly and helpful people, and are among the easiest going people in the Caribbean. With 32 public holidays, easy going is a way of life. Due to a strong economy, there is virtually no unemployment. The Governor is appointed by the reigning British Monarch Queen Elizabeth II. Bathing suits are for the beach and are not considered appropriate dress for walking around town. Covering up is considered common courtesy while visiting areas other than the beach. As in Great Britain, driving is on the left, so when crossing the street, be sure to look both ways.
